The issue stems from a setting on your television. Here are a few tips to change your television setting to your preferred language. On your remote, find the button labeled "Language". Press the button and use the arrow keys to select your preferred language. Press the "OK" button to confirm the selection.

Another common issue is related to the audio output. Check the audio settings on your television and ensure that the correct output is selected. If you are using a surround sound system, make sure that the system is properly configured.

Some televisions have a "Closed Caption" feature that can interfere with the audio. Try turning off closed captions to see if that resolves the issue.

If the problem persists, try resetting the television to its factory default settings. This will erase all custom settings, so be sure to note any important information before proceeding.

Finally, check for any software updates for your television. Manufacturers often release updates to address bugs and improve performance.

If you are still experiencing issues, contact the manufacturer's customer support for further assistance.
